Who made the Little Flower. The Atheist in his garden stood, At twilight's pensive hour. His little daughter by his side,

Was gazing on a flower. "Oh, pick that blossom, Pa, for me," The little prattler said, "It is the fairest one that blooms Within that lowly bed."

The father plucked the chosen flower, And gave it to the child-With parted lips and sparkling eye, She seized the gift and smiled.

"O, Pa-who made this pretty flower, This little violet blue; Who gave it such a vagrant smell, And such a lively hue?"

A change came o'er the father's brow; His eyes grew strangely wild; New thoughts within him had been stirr'd By that sweet, artless child.

The truth flashed on her father's mind-The truth in all its power;
"There is a God, my child," he said,
